The Sky's the Limit for STARWARD

The Land Down Under might not be the first place you associate with craft spirits today—but thanks to STARWARD, it may well be tomorrow.

STARWARD's whiskies reflect the capricious yet captivating qualities of Australia's Garden City, Melbourne, where they're made and aged in oak that previously held red or fortified wine from area producers. "Melbourne's highly reactive climate is our secret weapon in maturation," says Marketing Director Tess Syriac. "The temperature in Melbourne can fluctuate up to 12.5 degrees Celsius within a day, which gives our barrels limited time to rest. We like to think that they're some of the hardest-working barrels in the world."

Their effort is paying off. Inspired by his city's diverse culinary scene, STARWARD founder

David Vitale developed a passion for gastronomy that sparked his desire to create approachable, even food-friendly whiskies; the current range is a paragon of versatility, including the blended Two-Fold and the single malts Nova and Solera. (The latter is made by the complex process for which it's named, most famous in the Sherry-producing region of Jerez.)

Aussie in their character, universal in their appeal: That's the gist of STARWARD, which is raising expectations for Down Under whisky sky-high.

A Spirit Legend in the Land of the Rising Sun:

HOUSE OF SUNTORY

Shinjiro Torii founded Japan's first malt whisky distillery in Yamazaki, on the outskirts of Kyoto, in 1923. Inspired by the riches of Japanese nature and spirit of craftsmanship, a company was built that today is among the most venerated spirits producers in the world: House of Suntory. Suntory still makes whisky according to the Japanese ideals of subtlety, refinement, and complexity that Torii envisioned for his spirits all those years ago—even as succeeding generations of blending teams have continued to create new expressions to expand the horizons of the category.

A prime example is Suntory Whisky Toki: Released in 2016, this premium blend of whiskies from all three of Suntory's distilleries has proven a sensation among bartenders who've turned the Japanese tradition of highballs, made with high-carbonation soda water and extra-pure ice, into a stateside trend. Of course, Toki is stellar on its own as well, whether neat or on the rocks—offering an abundance of green apple, citrus, honey, and myriad herbs before a complex finish of vanilla, pepper, and ginger.

Today, Suntory's challenger nature and “monozukuri” craftsmanship has been applied to the introduction of its newest spirits. Take Roku Gin, which combines eight traditional gin botanicals such as juniper berry, coriander seed, and cardamom seed with six Japanese botanicals—including sakura leaf and flower, gyokuro and sencha tea, Sansho pepper, and yuzu. The result exudes floral and herbaceous aromas that lead to a multilayered yet silk-smooth palate with sweet-tart and spicy touches. Or take Haku Vodka. Double-distilled from fermented white rice and filtered through bamboo charcoal, it shows just how soft, round, and sweet quality craft vodka can be. Both Haku and Roku work well for putting Asian twists on classic cocktails. And, like every bottle of Suntory, they represent a pilgrimage to Japan, providing a rich cultural experience ready to be discovered by the world.

ROKU RICKEY

- ✕ 1½ oz. Roku
- ✕ ½ oz. simple syrup
- ✕ ½ oz. yuzu juice
- ✕ 4½ oz. chilled premium soda water
- ✕ Shiso leaf

Fill a highball glass to the brim with ice. Add Roku, simple syrup, and yuzu juice.

Top with chilled soda water. Stir and garnish with shiso leaf.

The New Malt Order:

AUCHENTOSHAN

Founded on the outskirts of Glasgow in 1823, Auchentoshan—which translates from the original Gaelic as “Corner of the Field”—has a long and formidable history of whisky making. But that’s not to say the distillery is stuck in the past. On the contrary, it strives to establish what it calls a New Malt Order with every drop it produces.

Triple-distilled to at least 80 proof from unpeated, painstakingly milled barley, Auchentoshan’s lineup runs the gamut of single malt Scotch styles. Two expressions form its core: American Oak, which matures in ex-bourbon barrels to yield aromas and flavors of vanilla and coconut before a crisp, subtly spicy finish, and Three Wood, which rests in Oloroso and Pedro Ximénez Sherry as well as bourbon casks—resulting in a smooth profile of dried fruit, hazelnuts, and butterscotch whose oaky sweetness lingers.

But Auchentoshan produces several other Scotches varying in age and wood treatment, including the signature 12 Year Old, noted for its nose of crème brûlée, citrus, and green leaf and its gingery finish, with nuts and citrus shining through every sip. No wonder the brand continues to grow at four times the rate of the category as a whole: It has its finger firmly on the pulse of today’s single malt enthusiasts—whether they prefer their Auchentoshan neat; in a cocktail such as the Glasgow Mule; or with an ale chaser, in true Scottish style.

The More the Merrier:

BOWMORE 18 YEAR OLD AND BOWMORE 26 YEAR OLD WINE MATURED

Established in the late 1770s by a local merchant named David Simson, Bowmore sits on the eastern side of the island of Islay and is one of the oldest distilleries in Scotland. Scotch enthusiasts from around the world seek out its exquisite whiskies, including rare bottlings like the Bowmore 18 Year Old, which features light smoke with touches of caramel, ripe fruit, and chocolate on the palate. In addition, the second expression in Bowmore's Vintner's Trilogy, the 26 Year Old Wine Matured, rests in former bourbon barrels and wine casks to produce layers of honey, tropical fruit, and spiced smoke, ending with a hint of chocolate and salt.

From the Birthplace of Corn Comes

ABASOLO ANCESTRAL CORN WHISKY

Alma de la tierra translates as “soul of the earth.” It is a fitting tagline for the only brand of Mexican whisky made from 100% ancestral corn, a staple crop that dates back over 10,000 years to Mexico.

Abasolo celebrates corn’s culinary and cultural importance to the country through its sourcing and production methods. It starts at the Destilería y Bodega Abasolo—Mexico’s first dedicated whisky distillery—with 100% non-GMO cacahuazintle, an heirloom variety passed down by generations of local farmers, which is then nixtamalized, or treated with quicklime, hulled, cooked, and ground into flour. Nixtamalization is traditionally the first step in preparing tortillas or esquites, but it has never before been used in spirits production; the team at Abasolo mixes the flour with a small percentage of malted corn and hot water to begin fermentation, a process followed by double distillation in a copper-pot still and oak aging in an open-air facility.

The result is a rich yet nuanced whisky with notes of honey, vanilla, leather, black tea—and, yes, roasted maíz. With a flavor profile unique to the whisky category, Abasolo is a smooth-as-cornsilk sipper that also has fascinating potential for mixology. It works as well in a highball with Topo Chico as it does in a spirit-forward Old Fashioned or Boulevardier. The soul of the earth is also the flavor of the future.

EXPLORING THE WIDE WORLD OF WHISKY

U.S. sales of imported whisky have seen a dramatic upward trend in recent years, but the spirit can be one of the most intimidating and complex to understand. There are a lot of factors that make a whisky unique, such as the impact of peat on an Islay Scotch, the use of French oak to create a softer flavor profile than American oak, or the many different types of stills in operation out there. But you don't need to know them all to understand what makes whisky so exciting—which is that, given the multitude of styles from every corner of the world, there is bound to be one that suits your palate, whether you're just starting out on your whisky journey or are a seasoned connoisseur.

Bourbon's BAND OF BROTHERS

Now an American institution, super-premium Booker's is the benchmark by which all other bourbons should be measured. The brand was one of the only uncut, unfiltered, cask-strength bourbons available when it was created by Booker Noe, sixth-generation Master Distiller and grandson of Jim Beam. The inspiration for Booker's came from a love of sharing bourbon the way he thought it should be shared.

Booker's offers the paramount bourbon experience. It is aged in deeply charred, American white-oak barrels for six to eight years in the center of the warehouse and bottled at barrel strength, which varies between 121 and 129 proof. The whiskey is an immensely aromatic bourbon with a huge bouquet, a broad palate, and a deeply satisfying finish.

In the early part of this century, Noe laid down barrels of rye that would eventually become the first-of-its-kind Booker's Rye Whiskey: uncut, unfiltered, made in small batches, and bottled at cask strength. The whiskey has an intense flavor profile and pronounced, well-balanced notes of toasted oak.

Another of Jim Beam's exemplary marvels is Baker's Single Barrel Bourbon. Made using a family strain of jug yeast, aged for a minimum of seven years, and bottled at 107 proof, it can reveal a range of nuances depending on the location of the barrel it occupied within the warehouse. At the 2020 San Francisco World Spirits Competition, it nabbed both a double gold medal and the title of Best Single Barrel Bourbon.

Equally seductive is Basil Hayden's, made with almost double the amount of rye in its bourbon mash. The result—which took a double gold at this year's competition—is a flavorful, peppery, and remarkably smooth bourbon whiskey aged to taste and bottled at an accessible 40% ABV (80 proof).

From the Springs of the Texas Hill Country:

NINE BANDED WHISKEY

Named after the nine-banded armadillo, Texas' state mammal, Nine Banded Whiskey was founded in Austin in 2015. The brand's name is also a clear nod to the capital city's famed 1970s music venue Armadillo World Headquarters, known as "the birthplace of Austin's eclectic communal culture," according to Sean Foley, co-founder and CEO of Nine Banded. "The Armadillo brought together hippies, rednecks, and cosmic cowboys around a shared love of great music and good times." Though it closed in 1980, its influence can be seen in the vibrant, diverse, and inclusive music scene that Nine Banded Whiskey draws its inspiration from today, says Foley, who calls the brand "Austin culture in a bottle."

The brand has two expressions, both blends of hand-selected whiskeys that see the addition of limestone-filtered water from Nine Banded's private spring in the Texas Hill Country. With its rich and round mouthfeel, the golden honey-hued Wheated Bourbon is best served neat or on a rock. The Straight Bourbon Whiskey, meanwhile, is crafted with versatility in mind, offering a spice-forward profile and a salted-caramel finish—try it in the Amaro Old Fashioned (recipe on the right). However you enjoy Nine Banded, you're sure to feel your inner cosmic cowpoke coming to life.

BARDSTOWN BOURBON

Bardstown Bourbon is challenging the perceptions of what a Kentucky bourbon can be. In the words of National Brand Ambassador Sam Montgomery, “Versatility [is] the most important thing. Does it work well in a cocktail? Does it pair well with food? And does it taste great on its own?”

Though it began as a distillery to accommodate brands without facilities, Bardstown Bourbon now releases its own line of Kentucky’s finest, including the Fusion and Discovery Series. The knowledge its team has gained along the way has cemented its ethos of collaboration and invention.

“This is a blend of three different bourbons,” Montgomery said of the Fusion Series #1, containing corn, wheat, malted barley, and rye. “On the side of the bottle, because we are a company that really values transparency, you can see exactly how we blended it—all three bourbons, age statements, where they came from and their mash bills, which the consumer always wants to know. So there are no secrets.”

But there are complexities: the expression’s coffee, peach, mocha, and banana aromas lead to a malty smoothness with a hint of white pepper and cask-strength heat. Dark coffee notes, rye spice, and nuttiness appear on the lengthy finish.

Its character comes through in Montgomery’s Boss Up cocktail, which combines Fusion Series #1 with amaro, dry vermouth, and a crème de banana rinse. It’s an ideal match for chocolate-covered espresso beans.

Boss Up

- ✕ 1½ oz. Bardstown Bourbon Company Fusion Series #1
- ✕ ¾ oz. Meletti
- ✕ ½ oz. Dolin Dry Vermouth
- ✕ ¼ oz. Tempus Fugit Crème de Banane to rinse
- ✕ Lemon twist (express and discard)
Garnish with a slice of banana.

LEGENT™

Where East Meets West to Make Whiskey History

As the great-great grandson of Jim Beam and the son of Booker Noe II, seventh-generation Master Distiller Fred Noe represents a long line of whiskey pioneers. Shinji Fukuyo, meanwhile, is one of only five people to ever hold the title of Chief Blender at Suntory. Between them, the two men have won more awards for their craft than they can count, including World Whisky of the Year (for Booker's Rye Whiskey and Yamazaki Single Malt Sherry Cask, respectively). When these two unparalleled talents decided to team up on a passion project, the result could only become an instant legend—or, in this case, Legent.

Combining the best of Kentucky and Japanese tradition, this extraordinary spirit starts with an heirloom Noe family recipe for bourbon aged in newly charred white-oak barrels, a portion of which is then aged further in red-wine and Sherry casks. Fukuyo meticulously blends these primary- and secondary-finished batches to achieve his and Noe's ultimate collaborative vision. The final product at once melds and transcends the categories on which it's based—showing as rich, round, and oaky up front, much like a true bourbon, then evolving on the palate into something more like a Japanese whisky, with layered flavors and a complex finish.

Taking a gold medal at the 2020 San Francisco World Spirit Competition, Legent is unquestionably suitable as a sipping bourbon. But it's also ripe for use in cocktails with a touch of East-meets-West flair, such as this one.

KENTUCKY KYUSHIKI

- ✕ 2 parts Legent Bourbon
- ✕ ½ part green tea simple syrup*
- ✕ 2-4 dashes lavender bitters
- ✕ Lemon peel

Stir together bourbon, syrup, and bitters. Serve on the rocks garnished with an expressed lemon peel.

*Green Tea Simple Syrup

- ✕ 1 cup sugar
- ✕ 1 cup water
- ✕ 1 green tea bag

Put sugar, water, and tea bag into a saucepan over medium-high heat and cook until sugar is dissolved. Squeeze tea bag and remove from syrup. Cool before using.

Whiskey Lullaby:

BSB[®] - BROWN SUGAR BOURBON

BSB - Brown Sugar Bourbon has quickly become globally recognized for its sweet, smooth finish of warm brown sugar with hints of spicy cinnamon. Based in Washington, the popular brand comprises two styles: BSB - Brown Sugar Bourbon and the 103-proof BSB 103. In designing the flagship expression, the makers of BSB, Heritage Distilling Co., aimed to create a product that would transcend generations and challenge existing expectations of a traditional whiskey. The result is an award-winning flavored spirit perfect for drinking straight or mixing into your favorite cocktail.

Beyond the namesake flavor, BSB offers up notes of gingerbread, nuts such as walnut and pecan, and stone fruit. Stirred with bitters over a clear block of ice and garnished with orange zest, it makes for a striking Old Fashioned.

Going Green in Orange County:

BLINKING OWL DISTILLERY

Distilleries that oversee production from grain to glass are few and far between: It's often easier and cheaper to purchase spirits and then age them in house. But for Brian and Robin Christenson—the founders of Blinking Owl Distillery in Santa Ana, California—a finished product is only as good as its ingredients. Local, sustainable sourcing is important to these self-proclaimed “grain nerds,” and in February 2018 they reached their goal of using only certified organic grain from California farms; what's more, they honor their role as the first craft distillers in Orange County by using locally grown Valencia oranges and hibiscus flowers in their spirits. Finally, they credit the water in Santa Ana—which recently received a gold medal at the Berkeley Springs International Water Tasting—for lending their products a unique quality obtained nowhere else.

Blinking Owl's impressive portfolio of nine expressions includes two vodkas, two gins, two bourbons, one rye, and a big surprise: not one but two aquavits. Aquavit has been all but overlooked by the U.S. spirits industry—but given the recent resurgence of aperitifs and digestifs, the Christensons thought, now would be the perfect time to step into the market. Rather than adhering to Scandinavian tradition, though, they looked closer to home for inspiration, macerating ten organic botanicals—not only caraway and dill but also the aforementioned hibiscus—into a base spirit made from organic wheat and malted barley. The result is a richly colored and complex aquavit, perfect for enhancing cocktails or enjoying on its own; a barrel-aged variant allows newfound fans of the category to explore it further.

As concern for high-quality, sustainably sourced ingredients expands beyond the dinner plate to the drinking glass, Blinking Owl has positioned itself way ahead of the curve, implementing conscientious practices that celebrate the rich agricultural history of California while bringing something new to the table (or bartop, as the case may be).

MAKER'S 46:

Kentucky Bourbon Whisky

In 2010, Maker's Mark introduced Maker's 46, the first new product to come from its distillery since the whisky debuted in 1958. Created using an inventive stave-finishing process, Maker's 46 is a bolder, more complex whisky that still retains the delicious drinkability of Maker's Mark.

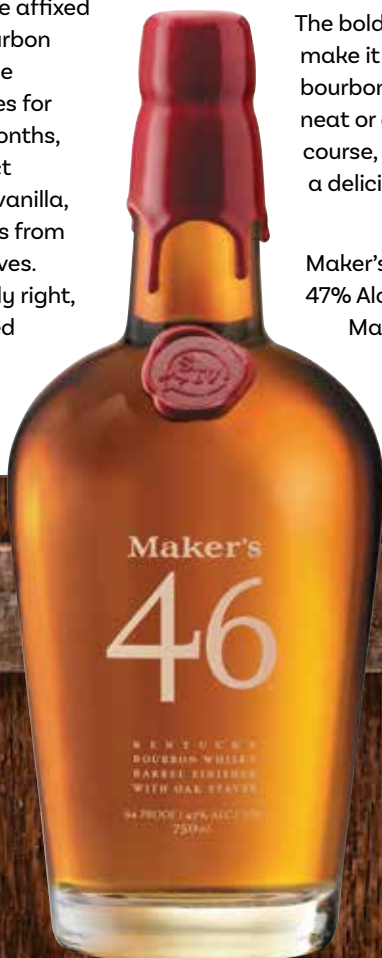

Maker's 46 begins with a foundation of fully matured Maker's Mark, which is made using soft red winter wheat (versus the traditional rye) for a bourbon that finishes on the front of the palate. Once fully matured, the bourbon is removed from its American oak barrel and ten seared French oak staves are affixed to the inside. The bourbon is then returned to the barrel where it finishes for several additional months, extracting the perfect balance of caramel, vanilla, oak, and spice flavors from the seared wood staves. When it tastes exactly right, Maker's 46 is removed from the barrel, bottled at 94 proof and hand-dipped in signature red wax.

Though bolder than the original, Maker's 46 is still soft enough to hold on the tongue even at 94 proof. With a deep, rich copper tone, the whisky has a generous and pleasant nose with hints of sweetness and oak. Its rich, creamy flavor, meanwhile, dramatically builds on the wood notes before finishing perfectly with deep, lingering touches of vanilla and caramel. Maker's 46 delivers a long, mouthwatering oaky finish unlike any other that begins on the back of the tongue and continually moves forward.

The bold flavors of Maker's 46 make it a sophisticated sipping bourbon meant to be enjoyed neat or on the rocks—or, of course, paired effortlessly with a delicious meal.

RABBIT HOLE DISTILLERY

According to an old adage, there can be only one captain of a ship. But that is certainly not the case at the eight-year-old Rabbit Hole Distillery in Louisville, Kentucky, where founder Kaveh Zamanian has bucked all convention by championing teamwork rather than having a master distiller—and the resulting whiskeys are the better for it. “Rabbit Hole is a family business, and that applies to all that we do,” Zamanian says. “[We] work together to make sure everything from grain selection to the liquid in the bottle meets our quality standards.”

Zamanian’s background may have something to do with his novel approach: He didn’t grow up along the Bourbon Trail, nor did he come up through the industry. In fact, it wasn’t until he met his wife Heather, a Louisville transplant, that he became a fan of the spirit and began digging into its history by reading books and talking with industry veterans. A fire was ignited as Zamanian saw an opening for himself in the marketplace: “The variety of bourbon recipes disappeared as the industry . . . moved from farmer-distillers to mass production,” he explains. “I wanted something different.” So Zamanian took the gamble of his life, leaving his career in clinical psychology and tapping his savings to create his own recipes.

Such dedication to the “belief that individuality matters,” in his words, has since paid off. Rabbit Hole’s unique mash bills and custom-made barrels yield a distinct flavor profile that bourbon lovers—and industry insiders—have fallen for. The distillery, now an official stop on the Kentucky Bourbon Trail that produces 20,000 barrels annually, has collected medal after medal for its whiskeys; the brand has also been named the official bourbon of the James Beard Foundation’s Taste America program. Here’s just a taste.

Boxergrail Kentucky Straight Rye Whiskey: Aged three-plus years in wood-fired, toasted, and charred New American oak. Aromas of brown sugar and butterscotch; bright citrus, floral, and herb flavors; finish of tea and baking spice.

Cavehill Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey: Four-grain mash bill; aged three-plus years in wood-fired, toasted, and charred New American oak. Nose of apples and honey; creamy palate with hints of toasted grain; vanilla-custard finish.

Dareringer Straight Bourbon Finished in PX Sherry Casks: Aged first in charred New American oak, then in Pedro Ximénez Sherry casks. Sherry-like aromas and flavors of dried fruits, nuts, and caramel on the nose and palate.

Heigold Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey: High German rye mash bill; aged three-plus years in wood-fired, toasted, and charred New American oak. Toasted malt nose; butterscotch and citrus palate; peppery finish.

RYE Renaissance

Whiskey is a spirit as indomitable as the spirit of America itself. Through ingenuity and grit, Americans created a whiskey that reflected their new environment. By fermenting a simple grain mash and transforming it into a liquid, they created a beautiful spirit as rich and storied as our country's history.

For example, the team at Limestone Branch Distillers in Lebanon, Kentucky, draws on seven generations of distilling tradition. The strain of yeast they use was reclaimed through DNA on a jug from the 1800s that was on display in the Oscar Getz Whiskey Museum Bardstown, Kentucky. This jug belonged to their ancestor, Minor Case Beam. In his honor, they reawakened the stills that were silenced during Prohibition and created Minor Case Rye. The rye's earthy aromas are surprising in contrast to its sweet butterscotch flavor; with a hint of dried fruits, it all culminates in a creamy mouthfeel. This profile makes Minor Case Rye perfect for classic cocktails such as the Old Fashioned. Here is a favorite rye cocktail of mine.

SIPSMITH

Brings Craftmanship Back to a Traditional Spirit

Jared Brown, Fairfax Hall, and Sam Galsworthy are more than just the founders of Sipsmith Ltd., the makers of traditional London Dry Gin: They're the architects of a craft-distilling movement that has permanently altered Britain's drinking habits.

On the surface, producing London Dry Gin in London doesn't seem particularly revolutionary. But this trio had to overcome legislation dating back to the mid-1700s that controlled still size—effectively blocking the production of artisanal-scale small-batch spirits and dashing their distilling dreams.

After quitting their jobs, downscaling their homes to raise cash, and persistently lobbying for nearly two years, they persuaded the government to lift the restrictions on the size of stills that could be operated in the U.K. In December 2008, Sipsmith received its precious license and was officially able to challenge the established order of Britain's previously comfortable distilling dynasties.

With the aspiration to bring distilling back to the city and the all-important legal clearance, the Sipsmith team now had a premises, a still, a recipe, and the beginnings of a brand. They began making their Sipsmith London Dry Gin using the traditional "one shot" method of distilling, meaning they only mix their end distillate with water to cut it to bottling strength—resulting in a smoother, more-rounded mouthfeel.

Along with its London Dry, Sipsmith also produces a sloe gin and a mighty V.J.O.P. Gin (Very Juniper Over Proof). The name tells you exactly what to expect—a 115.4-proof gin that simply explodes with juniper.

From the early days of Galsworthy making deliveries of individual bottles on his scooter, Sipsmith has gone global, exporting to the U.S., Australia, northern Europe, and Japan. The company has already outgrown its original distillery, and trade reports suggest Sipsmith's annual growth has exceeded 50 percent the past few years in a row. However, the original team remains committed to the same dream that led them to sell their homes ten years ago: sharing gin of the highest quality with discerning sippers.

SCAPEGRACE

A scapegrace is someone with a reputation for mischief—so it only makes sense that New Zealand’s Scapegrace Distilling Company has been disrupting the traditional gin category over the past several years, taking a bold, New World approach to craft that includes the use of 12 botanicals, glacial waters from the Southern Alps, and a 19th century copper-pot still.

Living up to its name, Scapegrace Classic emphasizes juniper and citrus on both the nose and the crisp yet smooth palate, where they’re enhanced by warming spices such as cinnamon, cardamom, and liquorice root; in 2018, it was named Best London Dry Gin at the World Gin Awards. That same year, the International Wine & Spirits Competition bestowed the title of World’s Best Gin on Scapegrace Gold, a navy-strength expression that adds tangerine to the botanical mix for a warmer profile laced with a bittersweet zest. Both products made the list of Top 100 Spirits at the 2020 Ultimate Spirits Challenge. From the bottom of the world, then, here’s a brand at the top of its game.

California Dreaming: SURF CITY

Surf City Still Works pays homage to the California state of mind as a craft distillery governed by a freewheeling philosophy, says founder Josh Kornoff: “We’re in control of the process—we do the distilling in house, so we focus on developing spirits that we like and know our customers will love.”

Kornoff and his wife, Elena, started Surf City in 2017 to produce a robust lineup of spirits.

The Huntington Beach distillery’s California Gin, however, holds a singular place in Josh’s affections. “The gin is the one that we wanted to get perfect from the onset,” he says. “If you’re going to make a cocktail, we’d love for you to make it from gin.”

Case in point: the Super Bloom. Served in Surf City’s tasting room, its notes of lavender, lemon, and elderflower complement the citrus and floral botanicals of the California Gin.

The gin isn’t the only spirit in the distillery’s portfolio, which also includes rum, vodka, and three bourbons. Each one is beach-themed and features the work of a different local artist on the label in liquid tribute to SoCal’s endless summer.

SUPER BLOOM

- ✕ 2 oz. Surf City Still Works California Gin
 - ✕ 3/4 oz. lavender simple syrup
 - ✕ 1/2 oz. lemon juice
 - ✕ 1 dash lavender bitters
 - ✕ 1 dash aromatic bitters
- Top with elderflower tonic.

*Back To The Future.JUNIPERO GIN

Gin has become a darling of bartenders across the U.S. thanks to innovative brands such as San Francisco's Junipero, which offers a fresh take on the spirit while maintaining a high quality standard. Distilled in a small copper still, Junipero Gin utilizes 12 different botanicals—not just the definitive juniper—to produce a spirit with complex, robust character.

While clocking in at 98.6 proof, it comes across as clean, crisp, and dry, delivering vivid floral notes and a creamy mouthfeel; those nuances moderate the perception of heat, making Junipero a great base for cocktails. Not only does its brightness and slight fruitiness benefit Martinis, it also works really well in spritzes and even drinks like this variation on a Harvey Wallbanger. The thrilling rediscovery of gin's versatility continues.

GOLDEN GIRL SPRITZ

- ✕ 1 oz. Junipero Gin
- ✕ ½ oz. Lillet Blanc
- ✕ ½ oz. Bénédictine
- ✕ ½ oz. fresh lemon juice
- ✕ 1 oz. fresh orange juice

Top with soda water and garnish with a mint sprig.

A Crystal-Clear Mission: GLASS VODKA

Seattle, Washington, distillery Glass Vodka is on a roll as smooth as its name. It earned immediate acclaim after its founding in 2012 with the release of its flagship product, distilled from locally sourced grapes (predominantly Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc). Since then, says founder Ian MacNeil, “We’ve rolled out three all-natural infused flavors: honey, Kona coffee, and cinnamon, and each one has been successful and award-winning in its own right. We’ve won over 53 awards in the last eight years.”

MacNeil’s mission is not only to make fantastic vodka but to draw attention to the beautiful Pacific Northwest and all that it has to offer. “My mindset is to be able to [support] the things in Washington that I love and that I’m proud of,” he explains, adding, “The state’s wine industry and grape growers are among the finest in the world, and our products celebrate them.” Glass Vodka’s sophisticated packaging, complete with crystal stopper, also alludes to the region’s unique heritage. “We are at the epicenter of glassblowing and studio-glass artists,” says MacNeil. “The name of the company itself is a nod to my friends who are in that world.”

Ever-ready to parlay his success into new products, MacNeil recently launched Glass Vodka Soda, a true competitor in the emerging hard-seltzer category. Combining vodka and real fruit essences, it comes in four expressions: Ruby Red Grapefruit, Mandarin Orange, Meyer Lemon, and an unflavored, unsweetened variant. “It’s here to stay; it’s not just a fad,” MacNeil asserts. “The difference is that most of those ready-to-drink products are malt beverage-based, and I decided to attack it differently.”

Heeding the Call of the Wild:

HUMBOLDT DISTILLERY

California's Humboldt County is resplendent with native flora and fauna, a fact that Abe Stevens could hardly ignore when founding the distillery he named for it. "What makes Humboldt County so special is that it showcases California in its natural state, which is something we try to do with our products," says Marketing Manager Ren Brownell. Located in Fortuna, the distillery steeps its spirits in their terroir—starting with the pristine water it sources from the Six Rivers Watershed, where centuries-old redwood forests dot the landscape and wildlife is unencumbered by the reach of urban development.

The brand's signature offering is its Humboldt Vodka, distilled from sugarcane without any glycerins, sweeteners, or additives. It's USDA Certified Organic as well as non-GMO and gluten-free, which Brownell suggests is part of the company's DNA. "Being organic is the biggest way we can have an impact on our environment," she says. Humboldt's Finest, meanwhile, is a hemp-infused vodka that nods to Humboldt's agricultural reputation while showing notable herbal character. In addition to its flagship vodkas, Stevens also makes two rums—Spiced and Original Rum—along with occasional, limited-edition whiskies and brandies.

Like the redwood trees that surround it, Humboldt Distillery is a product of its environment, towering above expectations.

Fortune Favors the Bold.

TOM OF FINLAND ORGANIC VODKA

If you've seen the photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe or videos of Freddie Mercury performing with Queen, then you've seen the influence of the late great Touko Valio Laaksonen—otherwise known as Tom of Finland—in action. Born in the Finnish town of Kaarina in 1920, Laaksonen blazed trails through the 20th-century art world with his bold depictions of the male figure.

And if you see a similarly daring, playful image on a bottle of vodka, then you'll know it can only be the brand that bears his name. Tom of Finland Organic Vodka was created to celebrate all that Laaksonen's work represents—courage, joy, and the freedom to live authentically.

Naturally, the spirit within that bottle is likewise authentic (and it has the gold medals from numerous prestigious tasting competitions to prove it). Made from 100% organic wheat and rye with pure Arctic water and no added sugar, the vodka delivers clean aromas with subtle hints of rye spice and a palate that's soft yet characterful. What's more, a portion of the proceeds from every bottle sale goes to the Tom of Finland Foundation, created in 1984 to preserve and exhibit erotic art.

Here, in short, is the brand enlightened, liberated drinkers everywhere have been looking for.

AN ODE TO VODKA

Vodka came to prominence in the 15th century. Despite the category's long and distinguished history, today's vodkas are not the same as your grandfather's. Emphasis on quality over quantity and innovation over costing are defining the new era of craft spirits, where risk meets reward.

In answering the challenge posed by craft bartenders and discerning aficionados, master distillers are leaping from established comfort zones in order to soar to new heights. For example, Damwelle Vodka, from our own Napa Valley backyard, redefines the concept of well spirits by offering a premium, smooth, clean product at a lower price. Those who think of vodka as relatively tasteless and odorless overlook the masterful attention to detail given by such skilled master distillers, whose efforts to achieve exacting clarity are anything but uncomplicated.

In its inspiring versatility, vodka defies its stereotype. It manages to be quintessential yet cutting edge, serving as a superb medium for creativity as it nods to artisanal excellence.

It's the Real Thing:

LYRE'S SPIRIT CO.

Lyre's spirit alternatives may not contain alcohol, but they're no less authentic for that. Sydney, Australia-based company founder and CEO Mark Livings guaranteed as much by spending a rigorous three years on their research and development. With the assistance of Australian sommelier David Murphy, he experimented with more than 1,200 ingredients in the course of building the Lyre's Spirit Co. portfolio, scouring the globe for all-natural, botanical essences, extracts, and distillates derived from fruits, herbs, spices, nuts, seeds, and more to create 11 dead ringers for the real thing: American Malt, Amaretti, Aperitif Dry, Aperitif Rosso, Coffee Originale, Dark Cane Spirit, Dry London Spirit, Italian Orange, Orange Sec, Spiced Cane Spirit, and White Cane Spirit.

As if nailing the aroma and flavor profiles of classic spirits and liqueurs weren't challenging enough, the Lyre's team has also managed to mimic the sensation that alcohol imparts via tongue-numbing botanicals like grains of paradise, an aromatic species of pepper that's related to cardamom and ginger. Persistence clearly paid off, as the expressions are compelling, with pure, natural aromas and lively, balanced, complex palates; the lack of synthetic flavors is one of the brand's most appealing features.

Layering Lyre's products is another way to simulate the presence of alcohol, according to Livings. "Even a large spirits portfolio from a traditional beverage company doesn't have the range that we do," he points out. "We're not restricted in any genre—instead we are opening avenues for unique cocktail recipes as much as we are supporting the classics. The combinations that can accommodate hundreds of recipes go from medium proof...to low proof to no proof." Indeed, it's possible to build many a drink using only Lyre's expressions, such as a proof-less Negroni with Dry London Spirit, Aperitif Dry, and Italian Orange.

The team at Lyre's hasn't overlooked the importance of compelling branding, rallying a particularly whimsical critter to their cause. The company is named after the lyrebird, a native of southern Australia that's one of Mother Nature's most talented impressionists, with the ability to mimic everything from a camera shutter to a chainsaw—just as its products precisely mirror their alcoholic counterparts.

With patents pending on the self-styled "flavor architecture" of its botanical recipes, Lyre's aims to maintain its early advantage in a segment that, based largely on consumer demand, is quickly evolving. Beyond finding a home on backbars or in wells, it also has plans in the works for ready-to-drink non-alcoholic cocktails in 200-milliliter packaging.

LYRE'S NEGRONI

- ✕ 1 oz. Lyre's Dry London Spirit
- ✕ 1 oz. Lyre's Vermouth Rosso
- ✕ 1 oz. Lyre's Italian Orange

Stir all ingredients briefly in an Old Fashioned glass with fresh ice. Garnish with an orange slice.

Captain Planet:

BATISTE RHUM

Green is the new color of rum. Founded by entrepreneur Tristan Mermin, Batiste Rum was designed to be the first eco-positive, clean, and sustainable U.S.-based craft rum brand with a single source in the French Caribbean. “All of the ethics and interests of the food movement that have been growing over the last 20 years—sustainability, organic product—they are about to start coming into spirits in a more meaningful way,” says Mermin. “[Batiste’s distillery partner] opened in 2003 with support from the EU and the French government to build the first ecologically correct distillery.”

Batiste Rum founder Tristan Mermin.

Raw rum agricole is imported, aged, and finished in Napa, California, to produce the existing Batiste expressions: Silver and Gold. The Silver offers a clean, floral flavor profile with vanilla, bread dough, and tapioca.

Though his rum can also be sipped neat, Mermin is keen to express that it’s designed for cocktails and also proudly notes that it’s free from additives, preservatives, and flavoring chemicals—not to mention free from guilt for consumers. “If we get it right, personally I believe the ultimate material to make alcohol from is sugarcane,” says Mermin. “It’s a perennial product—if you treat it correctly, it just keeps growing and growing. There’s a lot of benefit to working with sugarcane. It’s the only material that you juice the body of to make alcohol.”

Three's Company: DENIZEN

Denizen Rum was founded on the idea of crafting a spirit with big character and bold flavor—one that would harken back to the premium rums of yore. With the concoctions of adventurous barkeeps in mind, Denizen created its Merchant's Reserve by sourcing three different eight-year-old rums from Jamaica and Martinique, blending them together and aging them for eight years in used American oak bourbon barrels that impart a distinctly honeyed quality. Neat, it offers oatmeal and peach flavors along with those swirls of dark honey, which accent a dry minerality as well as the walnut and stone-fruit notes that are carried by classic aged rums.

THE HOLY TRINITY

- ✕ 2 oz. Denizen 8 Year Merchant's Reserve
 - ✕ ¾ oz. cinnamon-black pepper syrup
 - ✕ ¾ oz. fresh lime juice
 - ✕ ½ oz. Cynar Amaro
- Garnish with three mint leaves.

SUGARCANE SENSATION

Rum is one of the more complex spirits, with a long and rich history of production all around the world, where it's made in many different styles.

Most rums are based on molasses, a byproduct of refining sugarcane into raw sugar, which is fermented with water and then distilled. These can be made in a lighter style like Havana Club (from Puerto Rico) and Bacardi (also Puerto Rico), though they also can have more depth of character, as with Appleton Estate (Jamaica) and El Dorado (Guyana).

Rum can also be made with fresh-pressed sugarcane juice, the most popular styles being Brazilian cachaça and rhum agricole. Cachaças in our portfolio include Leblon, the bestselling brand in Brazil, and Ypioca. Some rhum agricole brands that we represent are Copalli (Belize), Denizen (Martinique), and Bhatiste (Charlotte Amali). Fun fact: Brazil is the number-one producer of rum in the world; the annual scale of production is greater than the world's total of vodka.

Although the most popular rums are made in Central and South America, some companies in the United States produce it as well: To name a few in California, there's Raff Distillerie (San Francisco), Surf City (Huntington Beach) and Humboldt Distillery (Humboldt).

The Beauty of Blanco:

DESMADRE TEQUILA

In 2016, Marcos J. Higareda and father-and-son distillers Rosendo Ramirez Gamino and Rosendo Ramirez Falcon joined forces to launch DesMaDre Tequila out of a shared passion for delivering a high-quality, unaged blanco tequila. DesMaDre distinguishes itself as an exceptional brand by showcasing the natural flavors and aromas of the famous Blue Weber agave of Jalisco's Los Altos region (its Norma Oficial Mexicana number, which denotes that a given bottle was produced authentically in Mexico, is NOM1519). Harvested at a minimum of seven years, slow-cooked with the Ramirez's own natural spring well water, double-distilled, and chill-filtered, this agave is the heart and soul of DesMaDre's Unaged Blanco—which in turn serves as the base for its Reposado and Añejo expressions, suffusing them with its complex essences.

While the clean and smooth Blanco offers notes of pear and white pepper that accent the flavor of the agave, the Reposado possesses a nutty, spicy character balanced by hints of vanilla imparted by eight months of aging in bourbon barrels. The Añejo, meanwhile, spends 15 months in bourbon barrels before it's finished in Sauternes casks, where it develops a rich, spice-laced profile of vanilla, toffee, and chocolate.

The Treasure of Jalisco:

In 1937, Don Felipe Camarena established the La Alteña Distillery in the Mexican town of Arandas. Eight decades and five generations of master craftsmanship later, El Tesoro tequila continues to be made in the painstaking, terroir-driven fashion its founder championed.

Estate-grown and hand-harvested by the renowned jimadores of Jalisco at 7,000 feet, El Tesoro's high-altitude agave develops a distinctly fruity, floral character that's only enhanced by time-honored production methods: The piñas, or hearts, of the plant are steamed in hornos (ovens) for two days, cooled, and then crushed under a two-ton volcanic stone called a tahona. After both the pulp and juice are open air-fermented with natural yeast and double-distilled to proof, three expressions are finally sent out into the world in hand-labeled bottles: Blanco, Reposado, and Añejo.

PASSION PALOMA

- ✕ 2 parts El Tesoro Blanco or Reposado
- ✕ ½ part fresh lime juice
- ✕ 1 Tbsp. passion fruit purée
- ✕ Pinch of salt
- ✕ 1 grapefruit soda

Fill a highball glass with ice. Add tequila, lime juice, passion fruit purée, and salt. Stir until chilled. Top with grapefruit soda and garnish with a grapefruit peel.

On both the nose and palate, the unaged Blanco is a celebration of pure agave, accented by subtle hints of white pepper and green olive. The Reposado, meanwhile, reflects its aging regimen—nine to 11 months in ex-bourbon barrels—via a profusion of fruit, smoke, and oak as well as spices and herbs both savory and sweet, from pepper and dill to vanilla. And the Añejo emerges from its ex-bourbon casks after two to three years with the mellower oak-infused profile of a true sipping tequila, complete with jasmine and vanilla notes. It's the essence of Jaliscan heritage.

Pioneer Spirit: REVEL

While products are constantly debuting on the liquor market, it's not often that an entirely new category emerges, as it recently has with Avila—an agave-based spirit created and trademarked by Revel Spirits. Richer than tequila and less smoky than mezcal, Avila must be made from 100% agave and produced in the Morelos region, located in south-central Mexico at 3,000 feet above sea level. Revel's agave plants, which are hand-harvested year-round, grow in the fertile soil surrounding El Popocatepetl, Mexico's most active volcano.

Once the heart of the agave plants—known as the piñas—are harvested, tequila producers would steam them in ovens while mezcal producers would roast them in large brick pits. Revel opts for both methods, steaming some of the piñas and roasting the others for 72 hours on volcanic rock. The combined and distilled result is a smooth, subtly smoky spirit that defies easy categorization.

Revel currently produces three expressions: the unaged Revel Blanco; Revel Reposado, aged 12 months in American oak whiskey barrels; and Revel Añejo, aged 24 months in charred new French oak barrels.

HARVEST MOON

- ✕ 1½ oz. Revel Reposado
- ✕ ¾ oz. fresh lemon juice
- ✕ ¾ oz. habanero-infused maple syrup
- ✕ ¾ oz. St. George Spiced Pear Liqueur
- ✕ 1 egg white

Add ingredients to a shaker and dry shake vigorously. Add ice and shake again before double straining into a coupe or sour glass. Garnish with grated cinnamon.

Cleaning the Smoke:

OJO DE TIGRE MEZCAL ARTESANAL

Though it's as lustrous as its namesake gemstone, tiger's eye, Ojo de Tigre Mezcal Artesanal is far more transparent—in every sense of the word. First, as a joven (unaged) agave spirit, it's literally as clear as could be in the glass. Second, the distilling team takes pride in its earth-conscious, centuries-old methods of production: The Espadin and Tobalá plants are farmed sustainably in Oaxaca and Pueblo before the harvested piñas are cooked in underground stone pits, wild-fermented in wooden vats, and twice-distilled in copper stills.

And last but not least, Ojo de Tigre is designed to appeal to the agave-curious with an accessible profile and price point. The intense smoke that dominates the nose and palate of the average mezcal gives way here to a more balanced, brighter, smoother character—one that allows the flavors of fresh, sweet agave to show through along with hints of green apple, citrus, caramel, and cocoa. Factor in an SRP of $32.99, and you've got a product everyone can see eye to eye with—whether served neat with fresh pineapple and a dusting of sal de gusano (spicy worm salt) or in a tropical cocktail with hibiscus syrup, ginger beer, and lime juice.

DOS HOMBRES

What makes two successful American actors take a road trip to one of the most remote villages in Mexico? Mezcal. Not being drunk on it (at least not at the time) but having a genuine love for the complex character of this relatively obscure spirit.

Aaron introduced it to Bryan and soon the longtime friends and co-stars felt compelled to introduce mezcal - tequila's older, tougher, eccentric, but much less famous brother - to a larger audience.

Putting brilliant unknowns on bigger stages is, after all, an instinct and a pleasure among the gracious people in their industry. And they really wanted to put a spotlight on this odd little gem.

TASTING NOTES:

APPLES: Aroma of apples and perfectly balanced Espadin agave.

MANGO: Hidden freshness and subtle sweetness of fruit.

LOCAL FRUITS: Hints of sapote fruit.

WOOD: A perfectly balanced, soft hint of the wooden barrels in which Mezcal is fermented.

SMOOTH SMOKE: A discreet smoky finish.

On Cloud Nine: DEL MAGUEY

The small village of Santo Domingo Albarradas is located in a tropical, high-altitude region of Mexico just south of Oaxaca. A majestic mist shrouds the surrounding peaks, valleys, and rivers, protecting the agave that grows here throughout the harvest. This distinctive terroir has inspired Del Maguey to craft mezcals with the sort of nuance that consumers typically identify with wine; its 100% Espadin Santo Domingo Albarradas, for example, is part of its single-village collection.

The rock soil on which the agave is planted shows in the minerality and floral-brush undertones of the spirit, whose subtleties make it a prime candidate for twists on classic gin cocktails as well as for sipping neat. In short, the Del Maguey Santo Domingo defies sweeping generalizations about the category, revealing that for all its wisps of smoke, single-village mezcal very clearly mirrors the place it came from.

NUBE NUEVE

- ✕ 1½ oz. Del Maguey Santo Domingo Albarradas
 - ✕ ¾ oz. Aperol
 - ✕ ¾ oz. Lillet Rosé
 - ✕ 3 dashes Fee Brothers Whiskey Barrel-Aged Bitters
- Garnish with an orange wedge.

MAGICAL MEZCAL

I love agave! I've always been an avid fan of tequila, but these days I'm more passionate about mezcal. It's been nearly a decade since my first sip of real mezcal—not firewater from a bottle with a worm in it, but a spirit made with care and craft.

Agave spirits are gaining popularity on cocktail lists and backbars, and mezcal is leading the charge. Espadín is the most accessible and affordable varietal because it can be sustainably farmed. Given the plethora of brands and styles, the category can seem a bit overwhelming, but here are a few reasonably priced recommendations for your well.

Del Maguey Vida: A classic. Launched in 2010, this brand is recognizable by its green bottle; the mezcal inside is rich with smoke as well as notes of honey, banana, and roast agave.

El Silencio: Robust with deep flavor, a little spice, and mild smoke. At 46% ABV, it has a creamy texture and a slightly earthy finish.

Amaras Verde Momento: Notes of grass and fresh peach, with a soft hint of smoke and sweet cream on the palate. This is great for beginners and advanced mezcal drinkers alike.

Whether you're sipping it neat or mixing it into a cocktail, mezcal is meant to be shared and enjoyed with others. ¡Dixeebe! and ¡Salud!

Slow and Steady Wins the Race:

ILEGAL MEZCAL

ACROSS BORDERS. ACROSS GENDERS.
LOVE YOUR NEIGHBOR
FROM ILEGAL MEZCAL
OAXACA, MEXICO

In business, it's often said that speed is essential to competitiveness in the marketplace; brands aim to shorten their ideation lifecycles and release new products early and often. The key to Ilegal Mezcal's success, however, has been quite the opposite. You might even say it takes its cue from the 100% Espadín agave it sources, which takes ten years to mature before it can be harvested and used to create the sweet and smoky distillate native to Oaxaca. “Sin prisa’ is our motto,” says Ilegal founder and CEO John Rexer. “It means ‘without rushing.’ We reinforce, over and over, that this mezcal is going to be something we can be proud of long-term.”

Founded 14 years ago out of Café No Sé, Rexer’s bar in Guatemala, the brand just celebrated ten years on the U.S. market. “I can’t believe we got here, but we’re here,” says Rexer with a smile. To commemorate the milestone, Illegal conducted pop-up bars all over the country. The goal, he explains, “was to bring people into a smaller venue where they can get to know Illegal in an unpretentious way. I guess the one non-negotiable for any guest experience is that if it’s not fun and real and all about the customer, we’re not interested.”

The simplicity of Illegal’s lineup underscores the brand’s commitment to showcasing the true flavor of Espadín: “Capturing the flavor of the plant is what it’s all about,” says Rexer. Illegal Joven is a full-bodied yet delicately flavored unaged mezcäl, expressing herbal aromas and bright citrus on the palate. The Reposado, aged for four months in used bourbon barrels, is a smooth sipper with herbaceous tones and flavors of baking spice and winter fruit, while the Añejo is aged for 13 months in American oak for a rustic yet rich, fruit-forward profile.

While producing mezcäl to compete with the world’s finest aged tequilas, Rexer also made it Illegal’s mission to be an active member of its community. “We are an activist brand known for causes we support,” he explains. “The company has had a philosophy since day one: you don’t ‘give back,’ you ‘give along the way’—and not just with money but with time and talent.” Illegal is actively involved with Team Brownsville, an organization that provides food, water, and other resources to asylum seekers at the border, as well as in school-building and beach-cleaning projects throughout Mexico. It also focuses on engagement with Latin American workers in the U.S. service industry. “The hospitality business is made up of people from all over the world, and many [of them are] from Latin America. It’s a community that can be mobilized quickly to make a change and have a big impact,” Rexer asserts.

Of the brand’s new campaign, “Love Your Neighbor,” he adds, “We began the campaign about a year ago, and we’ll be amplifying that message, especially given the humanitarian crisis that is growing at the border. We invite everyone to get involved.” To learn more about their initiative, visit illegalmezcal.com/love.

Illegal’s commitment to community is reflected even in its approach to sales. “Communication is everything,” Rexer says. “I try and make sure that those selling Illegal know they have an obligation to those making Illegal in Oaxaca—that their livelihoods are affected by how well we do and that as long as we have attention to detail, we will do well.” His insistence on forging personal connections has been a pillar of the company since day one. “In the U.S., our plan is to continue growing at a healthy pace while maintaining [the] very hands-on, person-to-person approach that has built the business. . . . We want to make sure it is here for many years to come.”

DID YOU KNOW?

The term “bitters” can be found in some of the first recorded definitions of the word “cocktail.” Historically speaking, bitters were used as medicine; then people began employing them to mask the flavor of poor-quality spirits. Through time and experimentation, they became an essential tool in the arsenal of mixologists on a quest to perfect their drinks.

The Best of Both Worlds:

MR BLACK COLD BREW COFFEE LIQUEUR

You know that awkward time of afternoon when you're unsure whether to have one last cup of coffee or your first happy-hour libation? Mr Black Cold Brew Coffee Liqueur has a solution.

The brand's origins trace back to a serendipitous meeting between distiller Phillip Moore and coffee enthusiast Tom Baker. In August 2013, Mr Black Cold Brew Liqueur was officially born. At the time, there were no other products like it on the market; without a playbook to work from, the team wrote their own, eager to showcase their skills as roasters and distillers alike.

Mr Black is painstakingly crafted 300 bottles at a time—each via a slow cold-brewing process overseen by Head Roaster Dr. Detlef Mohr, who eschews the use of vanilla, caramel, or any other ingredients that distract from the expression of the coffee. Such purity of flavor ensures that Mr Black's versatility as a mixer extends far beyond espresso martinis to Old Fashioneds and even "Black and Tonics." As both cocktail and coffee culture continue to evolve, Mr Black is perfectly poised to provide a welcome jolt behind the bar.

Honoring Mexico's Rich Tradition of Corn

NIXTA LICOR DE ELOTE

The importance of corn in Mexico's culinary and cultural history cannot be overstated. More than a crop, corn is the primary staple and valued heirloom of all indigenous Mexican culture as well as a foundational element in the national identity. Nixta Licor de Elote, a next-level liqueur that is inspired by tradition but rooted in innovation, was created to honor that history.

Nixta Licor de Elote is made from the season's best, most tender crops of ancestral cacahuazintle corn, grown near the distillery at an altitude of more than 7,000 feet above sea level. It's produced in two stages: Sweet corn is macerated in an exquisite corn distillate to extract all of its delicate flavor and then sweetened with clarified sweet wort that's also produced from ripe, nixtamalized cacahuazintle kernels.

The elaborate process results in a versatile liqueur that's true to its origins, with aromas and flavors of toasted corn, vanilla, and caramel as well as a silky, luxurious texture and a finish of roasted nuts and dried fruit. If there's such a thing as a liqueur of contemplation, Nixta may be it—but while it shines served neat, it also elevates cocktails like the Maíz Margarita with reposado tequila, agave syrup, lime juice, and bitters.

THE MYSTIQUE OF CHARTREUSE

The liqueur category encompasses many different styles and flavors, from elderflower (St. Germain), amaretto (Luxardo), and apricot (Marie Brizard) to crème de violette (Bitter Truth) and the multinational Curaçao. The most deservedly famous, however, is also the most mysterious: Chartreuse.

It is said that the ancient manuscript known as the Order of Chartreuse was already 500 years old when monks in Vauvert, France, received it. It described the 130 herbs along with the techniques used to make Chartreuse, but with their limited knowledge of apothecary, they could understand only bits and pieces of the complex recipe. After more than 100 years of study, they finally deciphered it in 1737, completing their first batch of the elixir in 1764. To this day, the formula remains a secret so heavily guarded that only two Carthusian monks (and their two laymen helpers) know the entire list of all 130 herbs, with each knowing just half the recipe.

EAUX-DE-VIE

Andiamo!: NONINO

Founded more than a century ago, Friulian distillery Nonino is globally recognized for its grappas more than its apéritifs. However, the latter have garnered an eager audience in the U.S., including the newly released L'Aperitivo Nonino Botanical Drink.

The origin story of the house of Nonino begins before the turn of the 20th century and winds through World War II, when the recently widowed Silvia Milocco developed a lighter, friendlier aperitivo. It remained forgotten for years, until her granddaughters and fifth-generation stewards of the house discovered the treasured recipe among family heirlooms and resurrected it for a new generation.

L'Aperitivo Nonino is a 42-proof, copper-pot-distilled apéritif whose complex mix of botanicals is still a closely guarded secret. While it's a natural in cocktails, it also drinks beautifully on its own, whether neat or on the rocks.

THE DRINK WITH NO NAME

- ✕ 2 oz. Breaker Bourbon
- ✕ ½ oz. L'Aperitivo Nonino
- ✕ ¾ oz. fresh lemon juice
- ✕ 1 oz. white peach puree
- ✕ 2 tsp. brown sugar

Garnish with a sprig of lemon verbena and a dried white peach slice.

The Case For BATCHING

In the past couple of decades, the craft cocktail scene has exploded, improving American drinking culture by leaps and bounds while employing the use of elevated spirits, fresh juices, in house shrubs and tinctures...hell, even custom ice!

But one aspect of bar service got lost in the evolution—speed. We’ve all been there: “Hi, two daiquiris, one whiskey sour, and what’s that drink called that they say takes eight minutes to make? Yeah, cool, one of those too,” says the guest. And, boom, you’re playing catch-up for the next half-hour.

By batching your cocktails, you not only increase speed but also ensure consistency and lower costs. Take the Negroni, for instance: The standard recipe is one part gin to one part Campari to one part sweet vermouth, so batching it is as easy as mixing together one bottle of each ingredient. Using formulas like this will make your ordering system more efficient, as you can visually estimate how many cocktails you have available at any given time and turn your three-bottle grab into one. Simplifying your high-volume cocktails, speeding up your service, controlling your inventory, and lowering your costs while likely getting better tips? It’s a win-win!
